Paperback. 60 pages. Dimensions: 11.0in. x 8.5in. x 0.1in. Since the end of the Cold War and its associated deterrent strategy, the United States global responsibilities have not only increased the U. S. Armys tempo in stability and support operations but has also increasingly challenged longstanding roles of traditional Army headquarters - particularly the division headquarters. U. S. Army divisions over the last decade have increasingly found themselves operating beyond the tactical level of war - an area they are not organized or prepared for. Division doctrine over the last decade has clearly framed the division as the Armys highest tactical unit, asserting that it does not prosecute the operational level of war. However, the realities of the last decade have demonstrated that Army divisions do operate beyond their traditional tactical roles and must be prepared to operate in much more complex environments that span the operational level of war. This monograph hypothesizes that U. S. Army Divisions are operating beyond the tactical level of war, and prosecuting the operational level of war on a routine basis. If this monographs hypothesis is true, two important questions emerge....
