

Lincolns Missing Papers and Chair

By Richard Ankony

Richard Ankony, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 280 x 216 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . This book started out with the most innocent of intentions until it acquired a life of its own which left me with the impression that it had become something out of the movie, National Treasure. My 98 year old father of whom I love dearly is my oldest friend on the earth and has been put into an old age home through no fault of his own by ways and means too gruesome to depict in the public square. My king has been captured and imprisoned now and I am his courier for this book. Throughout the years my father has told me many stories in detail of yesteryear and one story in particular stood out since about 1990. That story of which this book is about was an event my father witnessed around 1932 at Independence Hall, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. My father witnessed certain pieces of fabric upholstery being torn and taken from the original Abraham Lincoln's chair in which he was assassinated on April 14, 1865. My father further read at that time...
